Introduction

A hospital bed has special features for people who need to be in certain positions because of their medical situation. A hospital bed can change the height of the whole bed, or just the head or feet, or both. When a hospital bed is used at home, it is usually for a person who spends a lot of time in bed or can't get out of bed at all because of a medical condition. A hospital bed can be ordered (prescribed) by a doctor for many reasons. This includes changing positions in a way that can't be done in a regular bed, laying or sleeping in certain positions to relieve pain, or raising the head of the bed higher than 30 degrees due to certain heart or lung problems. An adjustable home bed is not a hospital bed. A hospital bed is durable medical equipment, which is useful only to a person with a medical condition. This policy describes when a hospital bed may be covered for use at home.

Note: The Introduction section is for your general knowledge and is not to be taken as policy coverage criteria. The rest of the policy uses specific words and concepts familiar to medical professionals. It is intended for providers. A provider can be a person, such as a doctor, nurse, psychologist, or dentist. A provider also can be a place where medical care is given, like a hospital, clinic, or lab. This policy informs them about when a service may be covered.

Policy Coverage Criteria

If coverage is available for Durable Medical Equipment (DME) then the following conditions apply.

Medically necessary hospital beds may be rented up to a period of 10 months up to the purchase price of an equivalent bed and in accordance with the member benefit as described in the member contract (see Benefit Application below)

Equipment	Medical Necessity
Hospital beds	Hospital beds (which include fixed-height, variable-height, semi-electric and total electric) are considered medically necessary when any ONE of the following indications are met: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The patient has a medical condition that requires positioning of the body in ways that are not feasible in an ordinary bed (Elevation of the head/upper body less than 30 degrees does not usually require the use of a hospital bed) OR <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The patient requires frequent changes in body positioning OR <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The patient requires the head of the bed to be elevated more than 30 degrees most of the time because of congestive heart failure, chronic pulmonary disease, or problems with aspiration. (Pillows or wedges must first have been considered and found impractical for reasons other than convenience) OR <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The patient requires traction equipment which can be attached only to a hospital bed A heavy duty, extra wide/bariatric bed is considered medically necessary when criteria are met for a fixed-height bed and the patient’s weight is more than 350 pounds but less than 600 pounds. An extra-heavy duty bed is considered medically necessary when criteria are met for a fixed-height hospital bed and the patient’s weight is 600 pounds or more. An alternating pressure mattress is considered medically

	necessary when criteria are met for a hospital bed.
Hospital beds, air-fluidized	The air-fluidized bed is considered medically necessary in the treatment of extensive burns (no other criteria is required). OR The use of air-fluidized beds is considered medically necessary when ALL of the following criteria are met: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The patient is bed-ridden and unable to fully or partially ambulate AND <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Has a stage 3 (full thickness tissue loss) or stage 4 (deep tissue destruction) pressure sore AND <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Has exhausted conservative treatment without improvement (such as frequent repositioning of the patient, optimization of nutritional status, debridement of wounds, wet to dry dressings) AND <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Would require institutionalization in the absence of an air fluidized bed AND <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Has a trained adult caregiver available to assist the patient with activities of daily living, fluid balance, dry skin care, repositioning, recognition and management of altered mental status, dietary needs, prescribed treatments, and management and support of the air fluidized bed system and its problems, such as leakage AND <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Has a physician who directs the home treatment regimen and re-evaluates and recertifies the need for the air fluidized bed on a monthly basis AND <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Has used and failed to get wound healing from all other alternative equipment, including, but not limited to, gel flotation pads, egg crate mattresses, and pressure pads and pumps

	Home use of the air-fluidized bed is considered not medically necessary under any of the following circumstances: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The patient requires treatment with wet soaks or has moist wound dressings that are not protected with impervious covering such as plastic wrap • The caregiver is unable to provide the type of care required by the patient on an air fluidized bed • Structural support is inadequate to support the weight of the air-fluidized bed system (it weighs 1600 pounds or more) • The home electrical system and home ventilation are insufficient for the anticipated increase in energy consumption and heat production The following types of beds are considered not medically necessary as they are not appropriate for use in the home setting: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Continuous lateral rotation beds • Institutional type beds • Kinetic therapy type beds • Oscillating beds • Stryker frame beds
Hospital beds, accessories	The following bed accessories may be considered medically necessary when criteria have been met for a hospital bed and there is documentation to support the medical necessity of the accessory: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Trapeze equipment • Bed cradles (to prevent contact with the bed coverings) • Side rails and pads • Innerspring/foam rubber mattresses as replacement mattresses for patient-owned hospital bed • Bed pans and urinals (for bed-confined patients) The use of safety enclosure/canopies are considered not medically necessary as they are considered nonmedical

	equipment (they are not for the care or treatment of disease or an injury).
Hospital beds, accessories (not covered)	The following beds and accessories are not covered as they are not primarily medical in nature: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Adjustable firmness/support mattresses (eg, Select Comfort) • All nonhospital adjustable beds (eg, Craftmatic® Adjustable Bed, Simmons® Beautyrest® Adjustable Bed, Adjust-A-Sleep Adjustable Bed, Sleep Number or Tempur-Pedic with adjustable base, and others) • Bed boards/foot boards • Bed elevation blocks • Overbed tables/trays • Positioning pillow/cushion/wedge <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ○ Criteria for reflux wedge pillows used for infants with GERD is addressed in a Related Policy • Power/manual lounge beds • Vibrating beds • Viscoelastic or memory foam mattresses (eg, Tempur-Pedic®) • Water beds

Equipment	Descriptions and Additional Information
Hospital beds, types and categories	A hospital bed is equipped to lower or raise the head and foot either manually or electrically. Hospital beds can be categorized as follows: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Fixed-height beds – allow manual adjustments to head and leg elevation but not to height • Variable-height beds – allow manual adjustments to height, as well as to head and leg elevation • Semi-electric beds – allow manual adjustments to height and electric adjustments to head and leg elevation • Total electric beds – allow electric adjustment to height, as well as to head and leg elevation An air-fluidized hospital bed uses warm air under pressure to

	set small ceramic beads in motion to simulate fluid movement. When the patient is placed in the bed, his/her body weight is evenly distributed over a large surface area, which creates a sensation of floating. It is used to treat or prevent bedsores or treat extensive burns.

Documentation Requirements
The patient's medical records submitted for review should document that medical necessity criteria are met. The record should include clinical documentation of:
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Diagnosis/condition • History and physical examination documenting the severity of the condition • Any medical equipment that will need to be attached to the bed • Weight if a heavy duty or extra heavy duty bed is requested

Benefit Application

Coverage for hospital beds and accessories depends on the member benefit as described in the member contract.

Coverage for bed rental will be covered for up to 10 months up to the purchase price of an equivalent bed and in accordance with the member benefit as described in the member contract.

When DME is purchased, the total benefits available cannot exceed the contracted fee schedule for the item.

When DME is rented, the benefits cannot exceed the total of the cost to purchase the DME or the contracted fee schedule for the item.

Evidence Review

In 2015, McInnes and colleagues updated a systematic review done by Callum and colleagues in 2004. The authors searched The Specialized Trials Register of the Cochrane Wounds Group in order to establish: 1.) the extent to which pressure-relieving support surfaces reduce the incidence of pressure ulcers compared with standard support surfaces, and, 2.) their comparative effectiveness in ulcer prevention. Fifty-nine randomized clinical trials were included in the review. The authors concluded that in people at high risk of pressure ulcer development (like the elderly and the immobile) consideration should be given to the use of higher-specification foam mattresses rather than standard hospital foam mattresses. The relative merits of alternating and constant low pressure devices, and of the different alternating pressure devices for pressure ulcer preventions were unclear. Medical grade sheepskins are associated with a decrease in pressure ulcer development. There was insufficient data to draw conclusions on the value of seat cushions, limb protectors and various constant low pressure devices as pressure ulcer prevention strategies.
