Introduction

To determine if a new technology may be covered, teams of doctors, pharmacists, and nurses review new drugs and medical services. The Medical Policy Committee reviews new technology and other medical or surgery services. The Pharmacy and Therapeutics Committee reviews new drugs and some therapies. These committees decide if a new drug or service will be covered. Their decisions are based on sound studies. Their decisions help protect against the use of treatments that are not proven or not safe. This policy describes how new technologies are reviewed and the resources used to determine coverage criteria.

Note: The Introduction section is for your general knowledge and is not to be taken as policy coverage criteria. The rest of the policy uses specific words and concepts familiar to medical professionals. It is intended for providers. A provider can be a person, such as a doctor, nurse, psychologist, or dentist. A provider also can be a place where medical care is given, like a hospital, clinic, or lab. This policy informs them about when a service may be covered.

Policy Coverage Criteria

The Medical Policy Committee (MPC) members and Medical Directors evaluate new technology, including medical and behavioral health procedures, pharmaceuticals, and devices, to determine whether the service(s) meet contractually defined coverage criteria. Behavioral Health, Dental, and Pharmacy Professionals are included in the Medical Policy Committee membership.

Description

The Company regularly evaluates new and developing medical, behavioral health, dental, and pharmacy applications of technologies, drugs, and services to determine if published scientific evidence supports the safety, efficacy and appropriate use of the proposed services. Using the general principles of research methodology as a consistent approach to evaluating new technologies promotes adherence to the standards of the National Committee for Quality Assurance (NCQA), a private, not-for-profit agency that maintains accreditation standards for health plans.

The Medical Policy Committee and Medical Directors use the five BCBSA TEC criteria listed below to assess new and evolving technology:

1. The technology must have final approval from the appropriate governmental regulatory bodies.
  - This criterion applies to drugs, biological products, devices and any other product or procedure that must have final approval to market from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration or any other federal governmental body with authority to regulate the technology.
  - Any approval that is granted as an interim step in the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's or any other federal governmental body's regulatory process is not sufficient.
  - The indications for which the technology is approved need not be the same as those which Blue Cross and Blue Shield Association's Technology Evaluation Center is evaluating.
2. The scientific evidence must permit conclusions concerning the effect of the technology on health outcomes.
  - The evidence should consist of well-designed and well-conducted investigations published in peer-reviewed journals. The quality of the body of studies and the consistency of the results are considered in evaluating the evidence.

- The evidence should demonstrate that the technology can measure or alter the physiological changes related to a disease, injury, illness, or condition. In addition, there should be evidence or a convincing argument based on established medical facts that such measurement or alteration affects health outcomes.
  - Opinions and evaluations by national medical associations, consensus panels, or other technology evaluation bodies are evaluated according to the scientific quality of the supporting evidence and rationale.
3. The technology must improve the net health outcome.
    - The technology's beneficial effects on health outcomes should outweigh any harmful effects on health outcomes.
  4. The technology must be as beneficial as any established alternatives.
    - The technology should improve the net health outcome as much as, or more than, established alternatives.
  5. The improvement must be attainable outside the investigational settings.
    - When used under the usual conditions of medical practice, the technology should be reasonably expected to satisfy TEC criteria in numbers 3 and 4 above.

The above criteria are listed in the majority of member contracts as the threshold to define services that are investigational. A given technology, drug or service must meet all of the criteria listed above. Failure of a technology, drug or service to meet any one of the criteria results in a designation of that service as investigational (or experimental and investigational) and therefore excluded by the member's contract.

Note: A small number of member contracts may contain differing definitions of investigational or medically necessary services. The member benefit booklet should be consulted for the definition of investigational and/or medically necessary for that group.

Disclaimer: This medical policy is a guide in evaluating the medical necessity of a particular service or treatment. The Company adopts policies after careful review of published peer-reviewed scientific literature, national guidelines and local standards of practice. Since medical technology is constantly changing, the Company reserves the right to review and update policies as appropriate. Member contracts differ in their benefits. Always consult the member benefit booklet or contact a member service representative to determine coverage for a specific medical service or supply. CPT codes, descriptions and materials are copyrighted by the American Medical Association (AMA). ©2018 Premera All Rights Reserved.

Scope: Medical policies are systematically developed guidelines that serve as a resource for Company staff when determining coverage for specific medical procedures, drugs or devices. Coverage for medical services is subject to the limits and conditions of the member benefit plan. Members and their providers should consult the member benefit booklet or contact a customer service representative to determine whether there are any benefit limitations applicable to this service or supply. This medical policy applies to all Company lines of business except Medicare Advantage.
