Introduction

This document provides an overview of how medical policies and clinical guidelines are created, approved, and updated. The Plan clinical review staff use medical policies, clinical guidelines, and member contract language to make clinical coverage decisions on certain services. This document defines some of these terms.

Note: The Introduction section is for your general knowledge and is not to be taken as policy coverage criteria. The rest of the policy uses specific words and concepts familiar to medical professionals. It is intended for providers. A provider can be a person, such as a doctor, nurse, psychologist, or dentist. A provider also can be a place where medical care is given, like a hospital, clinic, or lab. This policy informs them about when a service may be covered.

Definition of Terms

Administrative guideline: A document that supports or explains administrative functions related to medical policies, clinical guidelines, or benefit language. The guideline may support clinical decision-making.

Benefit coverage guideline: A benefit coverage guideline generally begins with contract language and provides coding or administrative examples to assist clinical reviewers in consistent decision making.

Experimental or investigational: Experimental or investigational services include a treatment, procedure, equipment, drug, drug usage, medical device, or supply that meets one or more of the following criteria as determined by the Company:

- A drug or device that cannot be lawfully marketed without the approval of the U. S. Food and Drug Administration and has not been granted such approval on the date the service is provided.
- The service is subject to oversight by an Institutional Review Board.
- No reliable evidence demonstrates that the service is effective in clinical diagnosis, evaluation, management, or treatment of the condition.
- The service is the subject of ongoing clinical trials to determine its maximum tolerated dose, toxicity, safety, or efficacy.
- Evaluation of reliable evidence indicates that additional research is necessary before the service can be classified as equally or more effective than conventional therapies.

Reliable evidence includes but is not limited to reports and articles published in authoritative peer-reviewed medical and scientific literature and assessments and coverage recommendations published by the Blue Cross and Blue Shield Center for Clinical Effectiveness.

Medical necessity/medically necessary: Those covered services and supplies that a physician, exercising prudent clinical judgment, would provide to a patient for the purpose of preventing, evaluating, diagnosing or treating an illness, injury, disease or its symptoms, and that are:

1. In accordance with generally accepted standards of medical practice; and
2. Clinically appropriate, in terms of type, frequency, extent, site and duration, and considered effective for the patient's illness, injury or disease; and
3. Not primarily for the convenience of the patient, physician, or other health care provider; and
4. Not more costly than an alternative service or sequence of services at least as likely to produce equivalent therapeutic or diagnostic results as to the diagnosis or treatment of that patient's illness, injury or disease.

For these purposes, “generally accepted standards of medical practice” means standards that are based on reliable scientific evidence published in peer-reviewed medical literature generally recognized by the relevant medical community, physician specialty society recommendations, and the views of physicians practicing in relevant clinical areas and any other relevant factors. The fact that services were furnished, prescribed, or approved by a physician or other qualified provider does not in itself mean that services were medically necessary.

Medical policy: A medical policy is generally based on the highest level of evidence available and addresses new or evolving technologies, drugs, services, or supplies. The policy usually establishes medical necessity or investigational status for the service, drug or device being addressed.

Utilization management guideline: A utilization management guideline is generally based on evidence, professional guidelines, clinical effectiveness data, and best practices.

Note: A small number of member contracts may contain differing definitions of investigational or medically necessary services. The member booklet should be consulted for the definitions of investigational and/or medically necessary for that group.

Administrative Review

Description

Development and Approval Process

Medical policies are Plan documents used to support coverage decisions for specific medical, surgical, or dental procedures, and behavioral health services, drugs, other ancillary services or devices. Medical policies frequently address medical necessity or investigational status based on the contract definitions.

Sources used in creating medical policies include but are not limited to the following:

- Blue Cross and Blue Shield Association (BCBSA) Evidence Positioning System®
- ECRI Institute
- Hayes Inc. Knowledge Center

- National Comprehensive Cancer Network (NCCN)
- Evidence Street® (Blue Cross and Blue Shield Association)
- UpToDate®
- Recommendations or guidelines from national physician specialty organizations
- Reliable scientific evidence published in peer-reviewed scientific literature generally recognized by the relevant medical, pharmacy, and dental communities
- Input from practicing physicians
- Materials from independent review organizations and any other clinically relevant factors
- Legal statutes, or state, or federal mandates

Plan medical policies are developed, reviewed, and revised by registered nurses, physicians, dentists, and/or pharmacists. This work is done with the support of Plan Medical Directors. The Plan Medical Policy Committee, composed of licensed health care professionals, approves the medical policies. The Medical Policy Committee reviews all new and revised medical polices during the Medical Policy Committee meeting or by electronic vote.

Medical policies are reviewed at least once per year but may have more frequent review based on changes in the scientific literature or clinical practice standards.

The Medical Policy Committee meets as needed to fulfill its mandate, at least nine times a year. The Medical Policy Committee is part of the Plan's quality improvement program, overseen by the Chief Clinical Officer.

Publication Process

After approval of a new or revised medical policy, it will be available in an electronic format on the effective date, the first day of the month following approval.
