Introduction

During the past several years over 30 states have passed “right-to-try” laws that are meant to allow severely ill patients to access drugs or devices that do not yet have FDA approval. Currently similar laws are being considered at the federal level. These laws are designed for people who have a life-threatening disease or illness and who may not qualify to participate in clinical trials. The laws allow members to seek drugs directly from manufacturers to access a treatment that might help, but is still being studied. The laws also protect doctors and providers from malpractice charges if they recommend a patient obtain these drugs. This guideline describes how your medical benefit plan may or may not cover services or treatments that a member may choose under state or federal “right-to-try” laws.

Note: The Introduction section is for your general knowledge and is not to be taken as policy coverage criteria. The rest of the policy uses specific words and concepts familiar to medical professionals. It is intended for providers. A provider can be a person, such as a doctor, nurse, psychologist, or dentist. A provider also can be a place where medical care is given, like a hospital, clinic, or lab. This policy informs them about when a service may be covered.

Coverage Guidelines

Services	Plan Coverage
For Washington and Alaska State Plans: Right-to-Try Investigational Services
Investigational drug, device, or service	Investigational drugs, devices, and services are contractually excluded because they are not approved by the FDA.
Services to provide drug, device, or service	This is contractually excluded as associated with the provision of a non-covered drug, biological product, or device.
Complications arising from drug, device, or service	Complications of a non-covered service are excluded from coverage by contract.
Life threatening or emergency complications	Complications from non-covered services may be covered under emergency benefits when the complication is life threatening or emergent.
Hospice or palliative care	The member, after choosing to try an investigational service or treatment, will still have coverage under a hospice or palliative care benefit.

Definition of Terms

Experimental and Investigational: Member contracts exclude the coverage of drugs and devices that fail to meet the following criteria:

1. The technology must have final approval from the appropriate governmental regulatory bodies.
  - This criterion applies to drugs, biological products, devices and any other product or procedure that must have final approval to market from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) or any other federal governmental body with authority to regulate the technology.

- Any approval that is granted as an interim step in the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's (FDA) or any other federal governmental body's regulatory process is not sufficient.

Serious or immediately life threatening disease of condition: A stage of disease in which there is a reasonable likelihood that death will occur within six months or in which a premature death is likely without early treatment (From WA RCW 69.77)

Investigational Product: A drug, biological product or device that has successfully completed phase one and is currently in a subsequent phase of a clinical trial approved by the USFDA assessing the safety of the drug, biologic product or device under section 505 of the federal food, drug and cosmetic act, 21 U.S.C. Sec. 355 (From WA RCW 69.77)

Washington State Right-to-Try Investigational Medical Products

In 2017 the Washington Legislature passed Senate Bill 5035, which was signed into law, and became effective July 23, 2017. A new section was added to the Revised Code of Washington as RCW 69.77. This law provides that terminally ill patients may seek to use investigational drugs, biological products or devices, that do not yet have final FDA approval, but have completed at least phase one of the FDA approval process. The law further defines serious and life threatening conditions, and outlines patient eligibility and informed consent requirements. The law states that manufacturers are not required to provide the product, nor are physicians required to refer patients for the treatment. Physicians are provided immunity from civil or criminal liability from unprofessional conduct allegations under RCW 18.130.180, whether they choose to refer a patient for these treatments, or not. Similar protections are provided for other healthcare practitioners, manufacturers, hospitals and facilities. Issuers, including health care service contractors (health plans) are not required to provide coverage for the cost or the administration of the investigational product. An issuer may deny coverage of harm or complications that the patient develops due to the use of the investigational product. The law states that issuers may not deny coverage to an eligible patient for the following:

- An eligible patient's serious or immediately life-threatening disease or condition
- Benefits that accrued before the day on which the eligible patient was treated with an investigational product
- Palliative or hospice care for an eligible patient who was previously treated with an investigational product but is no longer being treated with that product

Alaska State New Drugs for the Terminally Ill

In 2018 the Alaska State Legislature passed House Bill 43, which was signed into law, and became effective October 11, 2018. AS 08.64.367 was amended to include a new subsection. This act provides that a physician may not be subject to disciplinary action by the State Medical Board for prescribing, dispensing, or administering an investigational drug, biological product, or device, or providing related treatment, to a patient for the purpose of sustaining the patient's life if the patient:

- Has a terminal illness
- Is ineligible or unable to participate in a current clinical trial for the investigational drug, biological product, or device;
- Has considered, after consultation with the physician, all other treatment options currently approved by the United States Food and Drug Administration; and
- Has given informed consent in writing for the use of the investigational drug, biological product, or device.

The act further defines investigational drug, biological product, or device and terminal illness. Under AS 09.65 physicians or member of the medical team have immunity relating to use or nonuse of investigational drugs, biological products or devices when informed consent of the patient is obtained in writing and written notice of the immunity was provided to the patient. Manufacturers, importers or distributors of the investigational drug, biological product, or device have similar immunity if before providing the drug, product, or device to the patient's physician, they presented to the physician all treatment options currently approved by the U.S Food and Drug Administration for treatment of the patient's terminal illness as well as providing the patient written notice of the immunity. Under AS.47.32.030 the department may not require a licensed entity to increase services for the sole purpose of accommodating a physician's practice of prescribing, dispensing, or administering an investigational drug, biological product, or device or providing related treated to a patient.
