Introduction

Periodontics is a branch of dentistry that deals with diseases of the gums and bones that support the teeth. Periodontal disease is commonly called gum disease. Infections or other problems can also impact bone and other tissues around a tooth. Periodontal disease usually starts with gums that are red near where they contact the tooth, swollen, and bleed. Untreated periodontal disease can lead to tooth loss. This policy describes dentally necessary treatments for periodontal disease.

Note: The Introduction section is for your general knowledge and is not to be taken as policy coverage criteria. The rest of the policy uses specific words and concepts familiar to medical professionals. It is intended for providers. A provider can be a person, such as a doctor, nurse, psychologist, or dentist. A provider also can be a place where medical care is given, like a hospital, clinic, or lab. This policy informs them about when a service may be covered.

Policy Coverage Criteria

All medicaments must be approved by the FDA for use and used for their intended purpose.

Evidence Review

This Dental Benefit Coverage Guideline has been developed through consideration of generally accepted standards of dental practice, review of dental literature, dental necessity, and as appropriate, government approval.

Periodontitis is an inflammatory disease of the supporting tissues of teeth and is a major cause of tooth loss in adults. The onset and progression of periodontal disease is attributed to the presence of elevated levels of a consortium of pathogenic bacteria.

- Adjunctive regenerative therapy utilizing biologic materials is to be used for the treatment of periodontal disease defects of natural teeth only
- Surgical treatment of periodontal disease should be considered after:
  - History of conservative, non-surgical therapy,
  - Periodontal charting documenting the presence of pocket depths to 5+ mm of at least 4 teeth
